Travel to Spain this summer

Don Fellows will be traveling with members of the St. Paul Cathedral Choir on a ten-day Choir Pilgrimage to Spain this summer from July 14th through July 23rd. The trip includes visits to Barcelona, Zaragoza, Madrid, Toledo, and Escorial; and singing experiences in the Cathedral of Barcelona, the Basilica of San Miguel in Madrid, the Church of St. Thomas in Toledo, and the Monastery of El Escorial. The trip includes guided tours via private coach led by professional tour guides provided by Peter's Way Tours, lots of leisure time in each of these historic cities, first-class hotels, and many included meals. The cost of the trip is $3,300 which includes all travel costs and most meals (several 'meals on your own') from Pittsburgh. It is not too late to sign-up for this excellent tour. If you are considering an exciting, once-in-a-lifetime travel opportunity and would like further details, please email Don at donaldfellows@verizon.net and he'll send you a Peter's Way brochure.

Saint Vincent Archabbey and Saint Vincent College
Department of Fine Arts present a
Gregorian Chant Workshop:
Introduction to Contemporary Performance Practice
May 23 – 27, 2011

Fr. Stephen Concordia, O.S.B.

Introduction

In the past 60 years Gregorian Chant research on the ancient manuscript notation and on the evolution of the Gregorian modal system has brought about major changes in its performance practice. These include the recovery of ancient modes, a more accurate notation used in the new printed editions of chant, and a greatly augmented knowledge base for a reading of the earliest manuscript sources. For many choirs worldwide these developments have helped to connect singers of today to an oral tradition of over a thousand years ago. In the words of David Hiley: [when singing chant today] “something embedded deep in our history becomes audible” (Gregorian Chant, Cambridge 2009). (Italics and bold)

This intensive workshop will be an introduction to these changes and developments. Through historical, theoretical and practical study the workshop will provide a foundation for a historically-informed reading of the Gregorian Chant repertoire. It is intended to serve Church musicians - organists, singers, choir directors - who want to explore the use of this repertoire in their music ministry. The workshop is open to anyone with at least a fundamental understanding of the rudiments of music, some experience singing, and the ability to read modern music notation.

Fr. Stephen Concordia, O.S.B., a Benedictine monk and priest, has over 25 years of daily contact with the Gregorian Chant repertoire. He is Choirmaster of Saint Vincent Archabbey, Assistant Professor of Music at Saint Vincent College, and Director of the Saint Vincent Camerata and the Saint Vincent Schola Gregoriana. He holds degrees from the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston (B.M., M.M), and from the Pontifical Institute of Sacred Music, Rome, (Licentiate and Magistero in Organ, Licentiate and Magistero in Gregorian Chant) where he studied Chant with Nino Albarosa and Alberto Turco.

His recent activities in the field of Gregorian Chant include workshops at Penn State University, presentations to the American Choral Directors Association - Pennsylvania Chapter and National Convention, performances with the Schola Gregoriana at Heinz Hall with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, an organ/chant CD with the Monastic Choir of Montecassino, and a translation from the Italian of the chant textbook “Tones and Modes” by Alberto Turco (Torre d’Orfeo Editrice, Rome 2003). Previous positions include Director of Music at Saint Patrick’s Cathedral, NYC and Invited Professor of Gregorian Chant at the Pontifical Institute of Liturgy ‘Sant’Anselmo’, Rome.

Tuition: $300.00 Fee includes the $75.00 non-refundable registration fee.

Room and board: $320.00 Rooms and meals are provided by the Archabbey Retreat Program.

To register, send a check for $75.00 made payable to Archabbey Retreat Program, and mail to:

We Could Write a Book....

We Could Write A Book....

“Ego, Meet Humility”

From 1981 to 1991, I was a member a core of professional singers in a large city chorus conducted by a nationally known conductor. As in any of the performing arts, pride, ego and competition are part of the game. While most artists are extroverts, I am rather quiet...until I get on that stage; then my ego and pride kick into high gear. It was that pride and ego that helped me....and at the same time brought humility home in a dramatic way.

Such was the case when preparing for a concert of American music. It was one of the few opportunities when I was a featured soloist, and I was chosen to sing “It Ain’t Necessarily So” from “Porgy and Bess”. I was eager for the chance to sing the role of Sportin’ Life, whose character is a fiendish but seductive dope peddler; a character far removed from my own life experience.

As most musicians know, it’s hard to make a living in this business with just one gig. At the time, not only was I a paid chorister, I was also director of a community chorus, the university choir, two church choirs, and a part-time, travelling cantor for several other churches. As you can imagine, scheduling conflicts were a constant issue. As such, I found myself having to miss some of the rehearsals for the concert, which greatly annoyed the conductor. It wasn’t long before I learned through the tenor grapevine that someone else was singing my solo at the two previous rehearsals (that I missed) and rumor was that I would be replaced if I didn’t do well at the dress rehearsal. Well, that got my blood boiling, so I decided to show that conductor a thing or two.

The concert was being recorded, so at the dress rehearsal, the music hall stage was a snake pit of microphone cables and stands. When it came time to run “Ain’t Necessarily So”, I was more than ready. I walked out in front of the choir, careful not to trip on any of the cables, taking full use and command of the entire stage available to me, and strutting around like ol’ Sportin’ Life, giving it every ounce of dope-dealin’, black slave history that a white, suburbanite, twenty-something could give. And brother, I nailed that thing! I mean, I became Sportin’ Life! When the song finished, the acknowledging applause from my colleagues was inspiring. But what I really enjoyed was looking the conductor in the eye as if to dare him to take the part from me. We exchanged glances and the message was clear—I won. My pride and ego satisfied, I turned back toward my place with the choir....and walked face-first into the path of a microphone stand!

The next night, the concert was a huge success, and my rendition of “Ain’t Necessarily So” went off without a hitch, receiving enthusiastic applause from the audience, which is what we performers live for. So, what did I learn from this experience? That a little pride and ego are good for maintaining that competitive edge, but to also remember that “pride goeth before the fall”--- sometimes literally!

New Roman Missal

On Monday, July 25, 7:30 PM, at St. Margaret's in Greentree, Fr. Jim Chepponis will present an evening for diocesan musicians addressing the upcoming changes in the Roman Missal. Fr. Jim will give a brief overview of the new text and how they will affect the musicians and then present one new Mass setting from each of the major publishers, and the chant setting from the Sacramentary. The Mass settings chosen will be newly composed and be compositions that are versatile, adaptable and will hopefully be of use to all, whether work with a large budget and a cast of thousands or just an organist and a cantor. More details on this meeting will follow in the next month or so. Kevin Maurer will be our host.

Reflection

Do you have a job, or do you have a calling? There are times when we get caught in the mundane or difficult aspects of our ministry and can't see the moments of grace. But if Jesus were to sit down with us on a mountain slope and talk to us as pastoral musicians, he might say something like this:

"Blessed are you who sing psalms, for you have words to call on the Lord.

Blessed are you who play instruments, for you will hear God in gentle rubato and great sforzando.

Blessed are you who compose, for you are like the prophet, explaining the mysteries of God.

Blessed are you who teach, for you are passing on the prayer of music to others.

Blessed are you who practice diligently, for you know the peace of being prepared.

Blessed are you who give up holidays and weekends for the liturgy, for you shall inherit understanding family and friends.

Blessed are you who work for church wages, for you will know other riches.

Blessed are you who deal with many and different personalities in the parish and ensembles, for you shall inherit serenity and tact.

Blessed are you who help others to mourn through funerals, for you will inherit a great understanding of joy and hope in the resurrection.

Blessed are you who work with weddings, for your reward will be great in heaven."

Prayer

O God, you continue to bless us in many ways.

May we always have an open heart and mind to receive your great gifts.

May we celebrate our calling with joy!

In Sympathy

The prayers of the chapter go out to Joann Soltes, organist at Divine Mercy Parish in Beaver Falls, on the recent death of her mother, Mary A. Soltes, 98. Her daughter, Joann, was her caregiver. May she rest in peace.

Bus to Louisville

As of this printing we have 21 people interested in traveling to the Louisville NPM National Convention, July 17 to 22. We need 42 to make this a reality. Given the upturn in gasoline prices lately, you might want to consider this option. We have been given permission to park our cars at St. Margaret in Greentree free of charge for the week. We would leave Sunday, July 17 at 4:00 PM. The trip is listed at 6.5 hours. With a stop or two it should be about 8 hours. We would return Friday, leaving at approx. 1:00 PM. Depending on the number of people and a fuel surcharge the cost should be in the neighborhood of $90.00 per person. Anyone interested e-mail Herb Dillahunt at nasard@aol.com. Depending on the number of people we get in the next few weeks I will open this trip to the Wheeling, Steubenville and Youngstown dioceses to swell our numbers if we can't make this on our own.
